

TO ALL

Prime-Ministers, Chief-Governors, Deputies, Justices, and Secretaries, that are or may be

C--R--n, D--B--n, G--E--H-- and the Revd. Doctor B--tt; The 2d. Edition. To which are added,
Notes, various Readings, &c.

DUBLIN.

Printed for S. POWELL, in Crane-Lane.

2^d Edition

1755.

TO ALL
That this inimitable Piece is the joint and genuine Work of the Gentlemen mentioned in the Title-Page, may appear by the following Affidavit:

Co: C: Dub: Sworn } THIS Day appeared before June the 9th, 1755, &c. } me Sam. Long, aged 24
Years and upwards, Waiter, or Attendant at the Arms Tavern in Smock-Alley, and made voluntarily Oath, that on Monday the 2d of June inst. C — R — n, D — B — n, G — E — H —, Esqrs; together with the Revd. Doctor John B — tt, Persons to this Deponent well known, did assemble at said Tavern between the Hours of 9 and 10 in the Evening; and after much writing, blotting, laughing, and disputing, did there and then agree upon a Name or Title for a certain Book, or News-paper, which this Deponent remembers to have been the same with one now read to him; namely, to ALL PRIME-MINISTERS, &c. and farther this Deponent saith not. Sworn before me this 9th of June, 1755.

SAM. LONG.

JACOB DRURY.

DUBLIN

Printed for S. POWELL, in Queen-Street.

(3)

This is to give Notice, (n)

H A T there is to be hired, and will be ready to enter into Service by the 15th of September, next, or sooner, if required, A complete, thorough-paced, Ministerial Jobber, who by long Practice under different Masters, and having been Counsellor to the Counsellors of the several Factors, Overseers, and Agents that have been sent hither for thirty Years past, is at last perfectly qualified for any Post or Employment, and ready to undertake whatever he may be called or appointed to, generous or servile, honourable or dishonourable.

His Parts are curious and delicate, and his Principles exactly fitted. He has the (a) whole Theory of modern Politics in his Head, and is an Enemy to all Systems: Of such Sagacity, that he can tell precisely from what Point the Wind of Courts Favour will blow at any given Day, and with (b) Certainty compute its Force and Velocity, for the Prerogative of Princes, and the Rights of

(a) This Piece is not the less ingenious for being half-borrowed—see Tom. Brown, Vol. 2, the unborn Doctor having been Counsellor to the Counsellors, &c. O sensus, sensus, Patri! over and under at the same Time! Servant, and Overseer, to Overseers; quere, what were they sent for, or did these Gentlemen get it for them?

(a) He has the Theory, &c. but is an Enemy to Systems. A Theory without a System, we confess, is something very curious.

(b) Force and Velocity of the Wind.—had the Authors any Velocity in their Heads, they would know that the Force of Wind is in Proportion to the other, and expressly meant the same Thing.

but, as old Chaucer says, “whereas these punderlings “ beteyken thimseles to the Polynique or groundes of State “ matters, all manner of oundertending effusions even theyre “ Peates. —”

as to determine when to trim or to furl the Sails, when to tack, veer, or be steady; he has a Conscience susceptible of any Impression, and pliable to any Form, and yet so callous that nothing can pierce or give it Feeling, and can accommodate himself to all Times, Tempers, Occasions, and Circumstances; He can (c) bounce and bully, lye, shuffle and swear, fetch and carry, lick, crouch and lie down, sneak behind, or run before, as by a Nod or a Sign he is directed; for all which happy Talents and Attainments he can, if required, bring genuine Certificates from the different Masters he has served; but for easier and more unexceptionable Proof, chuses to refer (d) the Curious to his many memorable Votes, Speeches, and Lubrications, to be seen under the different Titles of Anecdotes, Pindications, Reviews, Letters of Advice, Charges to Grand Juries, a curious Collection of MS. Letters soon to be published, and a Multitude of inimitable Pieces weekly dispersed in the Univ. Advertiser, wherein he conceives he has clearly affirmed and contradicted, maintained and given up, reciprocally proved and disproved, all that has been or may be advanced by himself or by others on the several Topics of the Prerogative of Princes, and the Rights

(c) He can bounce, bully, &c. others read, we can bounce, bully, lye, shuffle and swear—it is certain the Party is not confined to Singularity in the Point.

(d) refer the curious—to a curious Collection of MS. Letters soon to be published. Here again our Gentlemen are at Variance with Sense: to refer is to send one back to something passed by, not any Thing to come. We suspect the Doctor penned this Paragraph, it being usual with him to conclude his Sermons by saying, but for the more clearly understanding this Point, I refer you to my next; in the mean Time, &c.—The Doctor has been cruelly referred to future Preferment, but another Paper or two like this before us, will probably shew him the Difference between the preter-perfect Tense and the future, tho' his Patrons are dull in comprehending it.

Rights of Subjects, the Duties of Electors and Representatives, and many other interesting Questions debated under the Heads of Barracks, Votes of Credit, and Interest and Independency of Ireland, City and Country Elections, &c.

In Parliamentary Craft he is a Veteran and Adept, can judge to a Second the critical Moment for putting a Question, and when to protract a Debate; how to puzzle a Question, and to perplex and confound an Evidence. For forming of Cabals he has no Equal, and in dividing and uniting of Parties, how jarring or concordant soever their Sentiments or Opinions may be: Of the whole Science of propagating Faction, by Libels and Lampoons, by Detraction and Slander, he is perfect Master, and boasts a superior Skill to any who have yet appeared in what there is some Difficulty in defining, but is generally well understood by the modern technical (e) Term, Dirty Work: Above all, he has the True Elixir or Grand Secret for restoring Disbanded Placemen, which he distributes gratis at the Shop of M_____ W_____ mson in Dame-street, hermetically sealed, and to prevent Counterfeits marked Probatum est R_____ C____, K____, where, out of Pity and Compassion to his own dear self and other languishing Patriots, he constantly attends from the Hour of twelve to four in the Afternoon,

(e) There is some Difficulty in defining the Skill, but it is generally understood by the technical Term, Dirty-work. We conceive the Definition of Dirty-work to be easy enough, without having recourse to technical Terms, for the better understanding it. It means only one's plainly Lying, Concealing, Perjuring, Forging, and Be-dev'ling himself, to serve his Patrons, and get a Place or a Pension: As the Gentlemen confess they understand the Practice, we here take the Liberty to help them to the Theory.

ernoon, and where the delicate, loquacious, and jealous of their Reputations may send their Proposals directed to DIONYSIUS.

As on various Accounts a Person so qualified is at this Time much wanted, it is proper to (f) inform the Public; that he has another extraordinary Particularity to recommend him: that in Spight of the Art and Industry used to conceal them from him, he knows all or most of the Secrets of the Cabal, now distinguished by the Name of Patriots, all their Ends, Interests and Views; the Quantums of their Merit, and the lowest Penny at which they would compound; and, under proper Encouragement, will discover all their Schemes and Machinations, as also how they may be successfully foiled and defeated.

Though he has never been out of Service, yet by contingent Deficiencies in the Finances of his present Masters, greatly in Arrear with him for Wages, he is at present a little (a) shabby, and for that

(f) We believe with our Author, such a Person to be much wanted on various Accounts, by several of their Friends, as well as themselves, against October next.

(a) He is at present Shabby, and for that Reason only declined offering himself at the common Mart, where such Servants are usually hired. Kind Reader be not astonished that these Authors bespatter their Friends, and libell them thus. By the common Mart is meant his M——y's Castle of Dublin, where it seems this Ministerial Jobber has not exposed himself to Sale. Does any one suppose such Traffick is carried on there? or would our Authors have the World think all other People as merchantable as themselves? it is said somewhere, they of a Man's Household, shall become his Enemies: No worse Friend than you bring from Home, i. e. to betray the Secrets of the House; there are twenty other Sayings opropos for these Gentlemen, which we omit for Brevity's sake. But they are a pack of Libellers all: C——R——n, libelled the common Laws; D——B——n libelled the Multiplication Table; G——E——H—— libelled the Quit-Rent, and the Revd. Dr. has libelled that Reason only has declined offering himself at the common Mart, where such Servants are usually hired.

He has of late appeared in the Garb and Form of a Whig, but it is well known that he is come of right orthodox high-flying Tory Parents, and instead of being taught when a Babe to kiss the Glorious Memory*, he never till of late drank any Memories at all, is still of the same sound political Faith of his Ancestors, and, if not prevented by unhop'd Contingencies, means to live and die in the same.

If he is suspected of being religious, which has been sometimes thought an Impediment to great Enterprizes, he freely appeals to his Parish Minister, whom upon several Occasions he has magnanimously hallooed, hissed, bullied and cheated; whether he has been seen in a Church for two Years past, except at a Vestry, to stop Salaries or hinder Repairs, or with a Bible in his Hands, except when examining a Deponent; yet for his true rational and manly Piety refers to that devout and excellent Form of Prayer lately composed and fitted by him to the Occasion, in the Univ. Adv. of Tuesday, May 20, and for his Modesty, Discretion, Gratitude to Benefactors, Respect and Reverence to his M^y and his Representatives, to those incomparable ones of May 27 and 31.

To belled St. Paul, not to mention Mr. Samuel Powel, whom he has libell'd worst of any, if fast'ning bad Books upon him be libelling a Man; for to say Truth, he and the Doctor have lost more by St. Paul, than ever they'll get by him.

* See a Passage in the Proceed. of the Com. vindic.

To prevent Trouble, the lowest Wages he will hire at is a middling Country Collection, and equivalent Pension, or any Civil Employment of the same Value; but as he has a natural Antipathy to the Smell of Gunpowder, he will accept of no Post in the Army; and all concerned are desired to take Notice, that were it not for the low disordered State of his own Finances, he would not offer upon such easy Conditions, as they are much lower than he had under his late Master, or was promised by his present ones.

N. B. No Proposals will be received after the said 15th of September, his present Masters having offered to raise his Wages, and to pay off his Arrears, if he will continue in their Service, as also to ease him of the Trouble of going on Errands, and the Discredit of wearing a Livery. In which honourable Office he is then to be succeeded by the facetious and humorous A—C—, Esq; (b) who has served as a Lacquey to a Nobleman of the first Rank for some Time to qualify him for the same, and with them he has conditionally contracted, if he cannot do better for himself by that Time.

Note farther: That the said Dionysius has invented a new Kind of Ink, red in Appearance, but which blakens better than any yet imported or in Use, and which Merchants in Town or Country may be supplied with at reasonable Rates.

(b) The facetious and humorous A—C—, Esq; returns the Gentlemen their Compliments and their Livery, not being out of Place, and having b. sides some Aversion to Shoulder-Knots of any Colour but red, that being the only one at present to distinguish a Gentleman Valet by, from a Scrub Stable-Boy, a servile Kennel-Sweeper, or a Break-neck Whipper-in.

6 DE 58

F I N I S.

